Re: Three Months and Nine Months Ended September 30, 2008, Unaudited Financial Statements

Overview of Third-Quarter 2008 Financial Results - Best Quarter Ever

CBOE reported record revenues and earnings for the third quarter of 2008. Fueled by record trading volume, revenues for the quarter increased by 24 percent to $120.1 million from $96.8 million in the prior-year period. The increase in revenues led to a 48-percent increase in pretax earnings compared with the third quarter of 2007. Pretax earnings for the three months ended September 30, 2008, climbed to $60.7 million from $41.2 million in the year-ago period. Once again CBOE demonstrated its ability to deliver consistent growth, reporting its eleventh consecutive quarter of double-digit comparable revenues and earnings growth.

CBOE's revenue growth was primarily attributed to higher transaction fees, which account for about 82 percent of total revenues. Transaction fees for the quarter were up 30 percent, to $98.4 million compared with $75.5 million in last year's third quarter, as CBOE recorded its highest trading volume ever for a three-month period. Total contracts traded for the quarter grew 31 percent, reaching 341.8 million contracts compared with 260.0 million contracts in last year's third quarter. CBOE's average daily volume was 5.3 million contracts for the third quarter this year, a 29-percent increase against last year's average of 4.1 million contracts. Additionally, the average rate per contract remained relatively even at $0.288 for 2008's third quarter versus $0.290 a year earlier.

The higher transaction fees accounted for 98 percent of CBOE's total revenue gain with the other line items accounting for only two percent, or $0.4 million, of the $23.3-million increase in total revenues. Interest income was down by $0.3 million for the quarter, reflecting the impact of lower yields on investments resulting from a decline in interest rates.

Focus on Cost Control Continues

For the third quarter of 2008 total expenses were $59.3 million, a seven-percent increase compared with the same period last year. The $3.7-million expense increase for the quarter primarily resulted from higher costs related to outside services, royalty fees and other expenses. These increases were partially offset by a favorable variance in the net loss from investment in affiliates. Costs for outside services grew by $1.2 million compared with last year's third quarter due to higher expenses related to consulting fees for systems and software development, legal fees and contract services. Other expenses increased by $4.1 million primarily due to higher costs for DPM market linkage, the program that reimburses DPMs for the cost of linking customer orders to markets at other exchanges. Expenses related to a new liquidity provider rebate program, which provides incentives to market participants for executing orders at CBOE as opposed to routing to away markets, also contributed to this increase. The $1.1-million increase in royalty fees was directly related to higher trading volume in licensed products. The $3.8 million favorable variance in the net loss from investment in affiliates was due to a charge taken in last year's third quarter to write-off CBOE's equity investment in HedgeStreet, with no comparable expense in 2008.

CBOE's revenue growth continues to outpace the growth in expenses, resulting in significant operating margin improvement. Operating margin represents income before taxes as a percentage of total revenues. For the third quarter, operating margins grew to 50.6 percent, up from 42.5 percent in last year's third quarter, underscoring the scale inherent in CBOE's operating model. CBOE has maintained strong cost control and will continue to evaluate its operations as the Exchange strives to gain even greater efficiencies and further leverage its business model.

Year-to-Date 2008 Financial Overview

During the first nine months of 2008, CBOE continued to build strong revenues and earnings, posting a 52-percent increase in pretax earnings on a 24-percent increase in revenues compared with the same period last year.

Total revenues were $322.0 million for the nine months ended September 30, 2008, an increase of $62.7 million from the same period a year ago. As seen in the quarterly results, growth in revenues was generated by robust trading volume throughout the year, resulting in higher transaction fees. Year-to-date transaction fees grew by $58.4 million, or 29 percent, compared with the first nine months of 2007. Total trading volume through September 2008 increased 31 percent to 899.6 million contracts compared with the prior year's 686.0 million contracts. CBOE traded an average 4.8 million contracts daily through September 2008, an increase of 30 percent over the daily average of 3.7 million contracts traded through September 2007. Additionally, the transaction fee per contract was $0.286 for the nine-month period this year, a slight decline from $0.290 for the nine months ended September 30, 2007.

Year-to-date 2008, CBOE's operating margin rose to 48.9 percent, an increase of nearly nine percentage points against the comparable period last year. This improvement once again highlights CBOE's strategic focus on maximizing profitability by driving top-line growth and maintaining tight expense controls.

Net income for the nine months ended September 30, 2008 was $91.4 million, up $32.4 million, or 55 percent, compared with the same period in 2007.

Consolidated Balance Sheets

CBOE's working capital (current assets minus current liabilities) increased by $21.1 million during the third quarter to $248.8 million at September 30, 2008. Meanwhile, cash and investments (excluding restricted funds) were $265.9 million at the end of the third quarter, up $26.3 million from June 30, 2008. These increases resulted from revenues outpacing cash expenses less capital spending.

Cash Flow

Operating cash flow was $52.3 million for the third quarter of 2008 versus $30.5 million for the 2007 third quarter. CBOE used cash from operations primarily to fund systems improvements and its growth initiatives through capital expenditures of $17.1 million for the third quarter. The majority of CBOE's capital spending supports its ongoing efforts to increase systems capacity and functionality, including hardware and capitalized software. The higher level of spending this quarter primarily was attributable to the development of initial systems requirements for C2, CBOE's alternative exchange initiative. CBOE today announced its intent to develop a new trading solution for market participants (see Information Circular IC08-175). This new, all-electronic options marketplace is expected to launch in 2009. The capital investment for C2 is expected to be approximately $25.0 million, with the majority of the systems development and corresponding capital outlay occurring in 2008. CBOE's total Capital expenditures through the first nine months of 2008 were $34.3 million.

Free cash flow, another measure of liquidity, defined as net cash provided by operating activities less capital expenditures, was $99.5 million for the nine months ended September 30, 2008, a strong increase against $53.9 million for the comparable prior-year period.

CBOE begins the final quarter of 2008 with a strong financial position and a clear focus on investing in the growth of its business. The Exchange operates in a highly competitive, evolving marketplace and is committed to taking steps that position CBOE to capitalize on opportunities as they emerge, while building on its brand and innovative products and services.
