SHANDA AND UNIVERSAL MUSIC TEAM UP
TO LAUNCH A NEW DIGITAL ENTERTAINMENT SERVICE TO MUSIC CONSUMERS IN CHINA

DIGITAL DISTRIBUTION OF MUSIC REACHES OUT TO ONLINE GAMERS AND INTERNET USERS

SHANGHAI, CHINA - APRIL 13, 2005: Shanda Interactive Entertainment Limited (Nasdaq: SNDA), the largest operator of online games in China, today announced a strategic partnership with Universal Music, the world's leading music company. Pursuant to a memorandum of understanding, Shanda will have access to Universal Music's online music repertoire, which will be offered to Shanda's millions of users through streaming and, in the future, on a downloadable basis over Shanda's interactive entertainment portal at www.poptang.com, as well as within the game operation platform. Additionally, Universal Music will provide music, artist-related information and news materials to be offered on Shanda's platform.

The strategic partnership between Shanda and Universal Music signifies pioneering steps for the two entertainment leaders, as Shanda will extend its interactive entertainment content offerings into the music arena for the first time. It also will mark Universal Music's first online music offering in the China market.

The alliance service is expected to be launched in June 2005 and users will be able to easily and legitimately access the best of Chinese-language songs by Universal Music's artists via an interactive song-streaming channel operated by Shanda. The services may be combined with Shanda's other offerings, including online games, as users may select song streaming as background music for game playing. Users may also select and dedicate songs to one another through the online game community. The music will be offered through a variety of alternatives, including a la carte selection, monthly subscription or bundled purchases. Users will be able to pay for this additional service conveniently by using Shanda's established payment and distribution system that covers over 300,000 retail points throughout China.

Harry Hui, President of Universal Music South East Asia, said, "What's hot in China right now is online games, the Internet and mobile technology. With the consumption of music heading towards the digital, mobile and personal, we're making sure that music plays an active part of all the exciting experiences for Chinese youths today. Shanda, as the most successful interactive entertainment platform in China, makes an ideal partner for us."

"This Digital music offering is another important addition to Shanda as we envision building a broad portfolio of interactive entertainment content offerings delivered through our operational platform to millions of users, including an increasing number of home users," said Tianqiao Chen, Chief Executive Officer of Shanda. "We are excited about launching our music services with Universal Music, the leading music company, through this partnership."

SHANDA, TURBINE TO BRING
DUNGEONS & DRAGONS ONLINE TO CHINA

China's Largest Online Games Operator to Distribute Turbine's
Highly Anticipated 3D Role Playing Game

Edgar Filing: SHANDA INTERACTIVE ENTERTAINMENT LTD - Form 6-K

SHANGHAI, CHINA - APRIL 21, 2005 - Shanda Interactive Entertainment Limited (Nasdaq: SNDA), the largest operator of online games in China, announced today that it will be signing a deal with Turbine, Inc., a leading publisher of online subscription entertainment, to bring DUNGEONS & DRAGONS(R) ONLINE to China. Under the agreement, Shanda will hold the exclusive rights in China to operate this first and only 3D massively multiplayer online role playing game, or MMORPG based on the world-renowned Hasbro and Wizards of the Coast DUNGEONS & DRAGONS(R) franchise. The game is expected to launch in China in the second half of 2005. Financial terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

"Shanda's leadership position and outstanding reputation with China's online gaming community makes them the ideal partner for introducing DUNGEONS & DRAGONS ONLINE to China," said Jeffrey Anderson, president and CEO, Turbine, Inc. "This agreement reaffirms Turbine's commitment to bring the D&D Online experience to every gamer in China and throughout the world."

China represents one of the world's largest and fastest-growing markets for online games, with International Data Corporation, a market research company, estimating a market valued at $1.3 billion by 2009. Shanda helped pioneer this market and today occupies the leading position as measured by both revenue and total game playing users. In 2004, Shanda had approximately 2.0 million peak concurrent users playing its online games.

"As the pioneer of traditional role-playing games, DUNGEONS & DRAGONS ONLINE is a terrific addition to our leading portfolio of both internally developed and licensed online game offerings," said Tianqiao Chen, chief executive officer of Shanda. "Turbine has done a tremendous job adapting this signature title to the virtual world, and we look forward to bringing a rich game experience to China's gamers via our national distribution platform."
