FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MONY GROUP BELIEVES ISS REACHED WRONG CONCLUSION

MONY Urges Stockholders to Vote the WHITE Proxy Card in Favor of Proposed Merger with AXA Financial

NEW YORK, Feb. 11, 2004 The MONY Group Inc. (NYSE: MNY) today announced that it believes Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS) reached the wrong conclusion in its recommendation regarding MONY's proposed merger with AXA Financial, to be voted on at the special meeting of stockholders on February 24.

MONY also noted that ISS provides a voting advisory service best known for its opinions in connection with, among other things, shareholder resolutions relating to corporate governance matters. Institutional clients of ISS are free to reject or accept ISS' voting recommendations and, for good reason, usually make their own decisions in connection with financial proposals, such as the AXA Financial merger proposal. MONY therefore believes that ISS' position will sway few votes, particularly given the financial ramifications of rejecting the AXA Financial merger proposal and the fact that a majority of MONY's outstanding shares are held by retail shareholders, many of whom are also MONY policyholders and arbitrageurs.

Michael I. Roth, Chairman and CEO, The MONY Group said, "We disagree with ISS' recommendation and believe that AXA Financial's $31.00 cash offer represents the best alternative for MONY stockholders. The fact that no other party has come forward since the September announcement of the proposed merger with an offer greater than $31.00 reinforces our view. Notwithstanding ISS' flawed evaluation, we note that stockholders who have publicly opposed the AXA Financial merger proposal have failed to present any concrete plan to create additional value for MONY stockholders or any credible alternative transaction to the merger with AXA.

While The MONY Group disagrees with ISS' conclusion, even ISS noted in its report that Wall Street analysts have warned that the market price of MONY may decline if the merger is not approved. In fact, analysts who closely follow MONY agree that AXA Financial's $31.00 per share cash offer provides full and fair value to MONY stockholders:

We continue to believe that AXA's bid to acquire MNY is fairly valued at this time.

The emotions are really high here and it looks like (the dissenting shareholders) aren't looking at the financials of the deal with objectivity.
