Introduction

On April 1

st

, First Data entered into a merge agreement with an affiliate of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. (KKR), a private equity firm, that will result in a buyout of First Data stock for $34 per share. We expect to close this transaction by the end of the 3rd quarter, subject to the approval of First Data shareholders, customary closing conditions and regulatory approvals.

Upon closing of the transaction, First Data will be a private company led by our management with the strong support of KKR.

Until the close, we will continue to be a publicly traded company.

KKR will raise equity and debt funding totaling approximately $29B to cover the buy out of stock, debt restructuring costs and fees related to the transaction.

3

Why Private? Why Now?

KKR approached First Data with a compelling value proposition.

This proposition is a great deal for our stockholders, and KKR is an excellent partner for First Data.

The Board of Directors concluded that the transaction with KKR is in the best interest of our stockholders.

The Executive Committee strongly supports the transaction.

4

What is a leveraged buyout (LBO)?

Leveraged buyout (LBO):

The acquisition of a company using a combination of equity and borrowed funds.

Generally how it works:

A company's Board of Directors agrees to be acquired.

The company's shareholders approve the transaction.

The acquiring firm purchases the company through a combination of equity and borrowed funds.

Shareholders receive cash for each share of common stock they hold.

Once the transaction closes, the stock of the acquired company is no longer traded on a stock exchange.

Often, the acquired company is held for a period of time by the acquiring firm, and either taken public again or sold.

5

What does private equity mean?

Private equity:

Equity capital invested in private companies.

Characteristics of a private equity firm:

Acts as a general partner that obtains specific dollar commitments from qualified institutional investors and individual, accredited investors.

Investors may include public, corporate and government pension plans; financial institutions; insurance companies;

endowments; etc.

6

Why Does a Transaction with KKR Make Sense?

$34 represents a significant and immediate premium on the stock for our stockholders.

KKR has a great reputation with the companies it buys. On average, its holding period is about seven years.

With strong, stable cash flows, a talented senior management team and a highly skilled employee base, First

Data has the critical characteristics for success as a KKR portfolio company.

9

How Does KKR Work with Companies?

KKR works with companies to design and execute plans for improving operations in such areas as manufacturing, sales and marketing.

Typically, KKR staff serve on the Board of Directors, closely monitoring the company, providing strategic insight and access to financial, operational and other resources.

In most cases, KKR enables the company's managers to have
