The following communication was provided to the Weyerhaeuser employees on November 8, 2015:

Merging with Plum Creek – What does it mean for us?

By now you've heard the news that Weyerhaeuser and Plum Creek have agreed to merge. I'm sure many of you were really excited at first, and then quickly began asking yourselves a hundred questions about what it will actually mean for you and for our organization.

I had the exact same reaction. When I learned we were going to make this significant step forward for our company, my first thought was, wow, that's really exciting. And my very next thought was, wow, we've got a whole lot of work ahead of us to make this integration successful.

The good news is that we've already shown we can do it, albeit at a smaller scale. The integration of our Columbia Timberlands team has been a great success and we hit all the targets we said we would in the timeframe we promised. I know we are capable of doing that again – this time at the company level.

There will be lots of details to work out over the next few months as to exactly what the combined organization will look like and I'll be the first to admit that I don't have all the answers right now. What I do know is that splitting Timberlands and Real Estate will allow our Timberlands team to be focused on growing trees and making money with trees, and it will allow our Real Estate, Energy and Minerals teams to be focused on maximizing non-timber revenue.

Overall, this merger will give us unparalleled scale in all geographies with lots of potential for synergies as we combine our strengths and best practices to create a winning company. This is a really exciting time for our company and for our people.

I do want to acknowledge the other announcement we made, however, which is that we could be potentially saying goodbye to our Cellulose Fibers friends and colleagues once the strategic review of that business is complete. This is really difficult news for many of us, especially those who work closely with our CF teams, often in the same offices. I do believe it is the right decision for our company and for our CF business, but that doesn't make it easier.

Both these announcements will create lots of uncertainty over the next several months. We've all dealt with uncertainty before, and it can be very challenging to stay focused. The most important thing for all of us right now is to focus on the safety of our people and contractors and running our business to meet or exceed the targets we set for this year.

I know you will have questions. Please tell your leader or contact me directly. As I said, we do not have a lot of answers today, but we are committed to understanding your concerns and communicating as much as we can as soon as we can.
