Index performance returns do not reflect any management fees, transaction costs, or expenses. Indices are unmanaged and one cannot invest directly in an index.

For the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 2017, Delaware Investments Dividend and Income Fund, Inc. returned +15.49% at net asset value (NAV) and +17.11% at market price (both figures reflect all distributions reinvested). Complete annualized performance for the Fund is shown in the table on page 3.

A strong economic environment

As the Fund s fiscal year began, investors in US equities found themselves in an increasingly optimistic mood. A strengthening global economy, coupled with the market s expectation for growth-oriented policies coming out of Washington, D.C., after Republicans electoral victories in November 2016, led to an especially favorable environment for cyclical growth stocks. Value and yield-oriented equities, which make up the majority of the Fund s assets, generally performed well in absolute terms but did not keep pace with the market.

A series of interest rate increases from the US Federal Reserve, which sought to limit potential inflation amid steadily improving economic and employment data, provided a further headwind for the yield segments of the financial markets. Against a strong economic backdrop, the Fed opted to raise its benchmark short-term interest rate by 0.25 percentage points on three separate occasions during the fiscal year. As of period end, the federal funds rate stood at 1.25%, up from 0.50% at the start of December 2016. US gross domestic product (GDP) a measure of the country s economic output grew by an annualized 3.1% in the second quarter of 2017 and an estimated 3.3% in the year s third quarter, according to the US Commerce Department. It was the first time since mid-2014 that US GDP expanded by 3% or better in consecutive quarters. Meanwhile, the US unemployment rate stood at 4.1% in November 2017, according to the US Labor Department, a 17-year low.

Gains across asset classes

For the Fund s fiscal year, US equities enjoyed strong results. US large-cap value stocks, as measured by the Russell 1000[®] Value Index, returned +14.8%. Meanwhile, high yield bonds, as measured by the Bloomberg Barclays US Corporate High-Yield Index, returned +9.2%, as the asset class continued to benefit from a healthy US economy, a small number of issuer defaults, and narrowing credit spreads meaning investors were willing to accept less yield in exchange for taking on credit risk.

Meanwhile, US real estate investment trusts (REITs) returned +10.4%, as measured by the FTSE NAREIT Equity REITs Index. In this asset class, investors encountered a significant performance dichotomy. Retail REITs, for example, performed relatively poorly, reflecting growth in ecommerce and a corresponding decline in sales at physical stores. In contrast, industrial REITs benefited from increased demand for warehouse space necessary to accommodate a growing economy and an increased emphasis on ecommerce.

Convertible securities, as measured by the BofA Merrill Lynch All US Convertibles Index, returned +15.6%. This asset class benefited from the combination of low marketplace yields and continued historically low interest rates, which contributed to bond performance while providing a tailwind for stocks and these equity-sensitive securities.

Individual contributors and detractors

Within the Fund s large-cap value equity subportfolio, several holdings stood out as notable performance contributors, including Abbott Laboratories, a pharmaceutical and medical device company that was helped by investors expectations for higher earnings growth; insurance provider Allstate, whose solid financial results helped drive the stock higher during the fiscal year; and Dollar Tree, a discount retailer whose shares rose sharply after the company announced stronger-than-expected second quarter financial results.

Significant individual equity detractors this period included pharmaceutical distributor Cardinal Health, which has faced challenging conditions owing, in part, to higher-than-usual deflation in generic drug prices; pharmacy benefit manager Express Scripts Holding (no longer in the Funds portfolio), where a contract dispute with its largest customer and the potential entry of Amazon into the pharmaceutical supply chain weighed on its shares; and energy services provider Halliburton, whose overseas operations have been challenged by low levels of production growth.

Portfolio management review

Delaware Investments® Dividend and Income Fund, Inc.

Several REITs also detracted in a performance environment that was more challenging for yield-oriented investments. For example, Brookdale Senior Living, an operator of senior care facilities, hampered results. Brookdale s shares declined, owing in part to the senior housing industry s cyclical downturn with excess supply, and influenced by what we believe were some management missteps at the company.

Meanwhile, in a difficult business environment for retailers, REITs that focus on retail properties, such as shopping center REITs Brixmor Property Group and Kimco Realty, both detracted from the Fund s results.

Sticking to our strategy

Throughout the fiscal year, we continued to pursue the same management approach we apply in all market conditions: We continued to look across multiple asset classes for securities that we believed had competitive yield and the potential for dividend growth. In addition, we maintained our emphasis on managing downside risk in the portfolio and seeking to limit potential capital losses.

During the fiscal year, exposure to US large-cap value stocks increased due to market appreciation and investment allocation, finishing at 54% of the portfolio, up modestly from about 50% a year ago. We mostly held steady the Fund s allocation to high yield bonds, which went from 33% at the start of the fiscal year to 32% at its end.

Other notable allocations in the Fund included REITs and convertible securities, which made up 11% and 3% of the Fund s portfolio, respectively, as of Nov. 30, 2017.

During the fiscal period, the Fund used foreign currency exchange contracts to facilitate the purchase and sale of securities in the Fund. The Fund also entered into options contracts to facilitate investments in portfolio securities. These derivative securities did not have a material effect on performance during the fiscal year.

Of final note, the Fund s use of leverage a portfolio management tool designed to obtain a higher return on the Fund s investments added to performance in light of the stock market s increase. Leverage has the effect of magnifying the effect of gains and losses. As a result, it added to the Fund s results in a strong market environment.

Positioning the portfolio defensively

As of fiscal year end, we recognized that valuations were at or near all-time highs across multiple asset classes. Even as we believe that equities could continue to do well in the short term, we do see high valuations as a longer-term challenge in the asset class. Another likely headwind is the expectation that China could start slowing its economy, after having engaged in substantial stimulus efforts since early 2016.

Therefore, we think it is prudent to avoid excess risk and continue to manage the Fund defensively. Within the large-cap value subportfolio, for example, the Fund had limited exposure to cyclical sectors such as industrials and materials, and in bank stocks, which were especially strong performers during the fiscal year.

In retrospect, it would have been helpful to have had more cyclical exposure in the portfolio; however, we stuck to our management approach throughout the fiscal year, and plan to continue to do so, because we believe this is in the Fund s shareholders long-term interest.

Accordingly, we will continue to seek to provide competitive income with a focus on securities that we believe have the potential to provide upside in the event of a rising market, and the prospect of declining less than the market if conditions deteriorate. Moreover, we see a strong argument for seeking companies that, in our view, appear undervalued, have strong cash flows, maintain manageable debt levels, operate diversified businesses, and have a history of delivering consistent dividends.

Unless otherwise noted, views expressed herein are current as of Nov. 30, 2017, and subject to change.

Diversification may not protect against market risk.

Fixed income securities and bond funds can lose value, and investors can lose principal, as interest rates rise. They also may be affected by economic conditions that hinder an issuer s ability to make interest and principal payments on its debt.

The Fund may also be subject to prepayment risk, the risk that the principal of a bond that is held by a portfolio will be prepaid prior to maturity, at the time when interest rates are lower than what the bond was paying. A portfolio may then have to reinvest that money at a lower interest rate.

High yielding, non-investment-grade bonds (junk bonds) involve higher risk than investment grade bonds.

Narrowly focused investments may exhibit higher volatility than investments in multiple industry sectors.

REIT investments are subject to many of the risks associated with direct real estate ownership, including changes in economic conditions, credit risk, and interest rate fluctuations.

The Fund may invest in derivatives, which may involve additional expenses and are subject to risk, including the risk that an underlying security or securities index moves in the opposite direction from what the portfolio manager anticipated. A derivative transaction depends upon the counterparties ability to fulfill their contractual obligations.

The Fund may experience portfolio turnover that approaches or exceeds 100%, which could result in higher transaction costs and tax liability.

If and when the Fund invests in forward foreign currency contracts or uses other investments to hedge against other currency risks, the Fund will be subject to special risks, including counterparty risk.

The Fund borrows through a line of credit for purposes of leveraging. Leveraging may result in higher degrees of volatility because the Fund s net asset value could be subject to fluctuations in short-term interest rates and changes in market value of portfolio securities attributable to leverage. Leverage magnifies the potential for gain and the risk of loss. As a result, a relatively small decline in the value of the underlying investments could result in a relatively large loss. Although the Fund will seek to manage the Fund s risk from the leverage associated with derivative investments by closely monitoring the volatility of such investments, the Fund may not be successful in this respect.

Closed-end funds, unlike open-end funds, are not continuously offered. After being issued during a one-time-only public offering, shares of closed-end funds are sold in the open market through a securities exchange. Net asset value (NAV) is calculated by subtracting total liabilities by total assets, then dividing by the number of shares outstanding. At the time of sale, your shares may have a market price that is above or below NAV, and may be worth more or less than your original investment.

The Fund may make extraordinary distributions of ordinary income and capital gains at calendar year end for tax and regulatory purposes. Those distributions may temporarily cause higher yields. There is no assurance that a Fund will repeat that higher yield in the future. Subsequent monthly distributions will likely be lower than these extraordinary, calendar year end distributions.

The Fund performance table and the Performance of a $10,000 investment graph do not reflect the deduction of taxes the shareholder would pay on Fund distributions or redemptions of Fund shares.

Returns reflect the reinvestment of all distributions. Dividends and distributions, if any, are assumed, for the purpose of this calculation to be reinvested at prices obtained under the Fund s dividend reinvestment policy. Shares of the Fund were initially offered with a sales charge of 6%. Performance since inception does not include the sales charge or any other brokerage commission for purchases made since inception.
