GRUPO PÃO DE AÇÚCAR AND CASAS BAHIA ANNOUNCE JOINT VENTURE

São Paulo, Brazil, December 4, 2009 Grupo Pão de Açúcar and Casas Bahia, two traditional and highly successful retail groups in Brazil and which have been constructing a history of commitment to the country for around 60 years, have signed a joint venture agreement to integrate their consumer durables businesses.

The alliance aims to bring the operations of Ponto Frio (Globex), Casas Bahia and Extra Eletro (Grupo Pão de Açúcar) together under a single company, which will enable them to capture synergies while offering benefits to consumers by way of a wider assortment of products, improved customer service and easier access to credit.

Grupo Pão de Açúcar, following its Board of Directors' strategic guidelines of becoming the most efficient food and non-food company in Brazil and to broaden its expertise in this sector, believes this partnership will ensure the best practices in consumer durables sales.

Casas Bahia, recognizably the best retailer in the country in its area of business and a strong player in information technology, logistics and consumer market knowledge, especially among the lower income segments, believes this alliance will bring benefits to all Brazilians. We will strengthen the company and transfer the benefits of this alliance to clients, who can expect a greater variety of products and services, excellent customer service, better payment conditions with increased credit availability, besides being able to expand our operations to cities and regions where we do not yet have a presence, says Michael Klein, the CEO of Casas Bahia.

Following the example of other sectors, it is extremely important that Brazilian retailers consolidate themselves and, at this time of higher domestic demand, launch initiatives to improve their competitive advantage and bring benefits to the consumer.

This agreement comes at time of enormous changes and opportunities in the country. The Brazilian economy is going through an important phase, marked by credit expansion, increased job opportunities and income, with the highlight being the sustainable growth of domestic consumption, says Abilio Diniz, Chairman of the Board of Grupo Pão de Açúcar.

The companies in this alliance are the result of the entrepreneurship of immigrants, who built a history of hard work and success based on their strong confidence in the country and being closely connected to the daily routine and homes of many Brazilians. Grupo Pão de Açúcar and Casas Bahia share the same beliefs and values and, hence, will build an organization that is further committed to Brazil and will continue with the objective of creating job opportunities in its different areas of operations.

For Casas Bahia and its controllers, this deal will provide the opportunity for the perpetuity of the company founded by Samuel Klein 57 years ago. The alliance with Grupo Pão de Açúcar will provide access to the highest corporate governance practices, which will give the new company greater transparency. And, in the context of modern management practices, the Klein family will play a fundamental role by bringing its knowledge and experience in this market niche.

Consumers, the biggest beneficiaries of this alliance, will get the same level of service in all the stores and formats, certain that Casas Bahia and Grupo Pão de Açúcar continue with their firm proposal of maintaining the total dedication to their clients in a place of happy people .
