Item 2.06 Material Impairments

On December 16, 2008, Fulton Financial Corporation (the Corporation) determined that it expects to record non-cash charges during the fourth quarter of 2008 related to the impairment of goodwill and the other-than-temporary impairment of pooled trust preferred investment securities, and expects to record an increase in its provision for loan losses. The goodwill impairment charge is expected to be approximately $90 million, pending the finalization of the goodwill impairment test discussed below. The provision for loan losses is expected to be approximately $65 million for the fourth quarter of 2008, compared to $26.7 million recorded in the third quarter of 2008. The other-than-temporary impairment charge is expected to be approximately $15 million, depending upon actual market conditions at December 31, 2008 and completion of valuation modeling.

Goodwill Impairment Charge

Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 142, Goodwill and Other Intangible Assets, requires that the Corporation perform an annual test of goodwill impairment. The Corporation performs this test on October 31st of each year for each of its affiliate banks and financial service subsidiaries with allocated goodwill, also known as reporting units. Based on the results of this annual goodwill impairment test, the Corporation concluded that an approximately $90 million impairment charge is required related to its Columbia Bank reporting unit (Columbia). The Corporation also determined that none of the goodwill allocated to any of its other reporting units was impaired, however, there can be no assurance that future tests of goodwill will not result in findings of goodwill impairment. For the purpose of the impairment test, the fair value of Columbia was based upon observable market transactions for comparable organizations, as well as the future cash flows expected to be generated by the reporting unit. The Columbia goodwill impairment is a result of several factors, including decreases in trading multiples of the stocks of comparable organizations, a decrease in expected cash flows for Columbia due to the current interest rate environment, which has negatively affected Columbia's net interest income, and deterioration in the credit quality of Columbia's commercial real estate portfolio.

The goodwill impairment charge has no impact on the Corporation's regulatory capital ratios and will not affect the Corporation's overall liquidity position. The goodwill impairment charge is not deductible for income tax purposes.

Increase in Provision for Loan Losses

The Corporation expects to record a provision for loan losses of approximately $65 million in the fourth quarter of 2008. As a result, the total provision for the year ending December 31, 2008 will be approximately $120 million and the allowance for loan losses will be approximately 1.46% of total loans as of December 31, 2008. The expected increase in the provision for loan losses is a result of the Corporation's existing allowance methodology and is caused by a variety of factors including current and expected economic conditions, the continued stress on real estate values, and increasing non-performing assets and net charge-offs.

Other-Than-Temporary Investment Impairment Charge

The Corporation's investments in pooled trust preferred securities issued by financial institutions had a cost basis of $32.2 million and a fair value of $22.7 million as of September 30, 2008. During the fourth quarter, several of these securities were downgraded by ratings agencies.

The Corporation has concluded that securities with a carrying value of $31.2 million are other-than-temporarily impaired based on our cash flow analysis and recent downgrades of credit ratings. The estimated fair value of these securities is approximately $16 million, therefore a pre-tax loss of approximately $15 million will be recognized for the other-than-temporary impairment of pooled trust preferred securities.
