16 Management changes driving stockholder value Management team is focused on the challenges ahead Two of top three management positions appointed in the last 12 months Reorganized management structure with specific division heads for: Aerospace/Military, Medical, and Industrial W. Barry Gilbert, CEO Turned the company around and has served as CEO of the Company since 2004 Served as Director of the Company since 1993 and Chairman of the Board since 2001 Largest individual stockholder Michael Williams, Chief Financial Officer (appointed May 2014) Over 20 years of experience with a strong history of operations and financial positions at firms including Bausch & Lomb, Harris Corporation and KPMG Peat Marwick Brett Mancini, Vice President, Business Development (appointed February 2014) Over 20 years experience in the electronic manufacturing industry, six years with IEC Has led a revitalization of the Company's sales activity and brought our backlog to the highest level in the last three years.

17 On July 31, 2014, the Board announced the adoption of a Tax Benefit Preservation Plan. The Company strongly believes that preserving the value of its NOL's enhances stockholder value – Unlike many public companies, we have a small institutional stockholder base – The large retail base has varying levels of sophistication and might be easily influenced. The Company had $16.3 million of federal NOLs at the end of fiscal 2014. The NOL is an asset; preserving it enhances stockholder value.

18 Vintage nominees collectively do not have the relevant experience possessed by the current board – Five of seven Vintage nominees have little or no experience serving on a public company board. Vintage has not articulated a better business plan for the company beyond “throw the bums out” – These same bums increased stockholder value from $.04 cents to >$5.00 Vintage has wrongly accused the IEC Board of being unwilling to entertain offers of acquisition. – Flat out false IEC believes Vintage is seeking control without paying a control premium at the expense of the small shareholder IEC believes Vintage’s slate will not add stockholder value

19 Vintage's slate is fundamentally flawed and suffers serious conflicts of interest – Three of the Vintage nominees have ties to API (ticker ATNY), a competing contract manufacturing firm, presenting serious challenges in acting solely in IEC stockholders' best interest – Brian Kahn, Chairman of API is the managing partner of Vintage. Vintage has dramatically failed with the API acquisition. Between January 20, 2011, the day before Vintage acquired control of API, and January 9, 2015, API's stock price has fallen from $6.05 to $1.95 per share. API is Vintage's only portfolio company in the same business as IEC. IEC believes Vintage's slate will not add stockholder value and it's managerial prowess is most suspect.

20 Vintage's contract manufacturing prowess (continued) Beginning with the quarter ended May 31, 2011 (the first full quarter of API under Vintage's control) through the quarter ended August 31, 2014 (the most recent quarter for which API information is available), API has experienced aggregate operating losses of $26.7 million and aggregate losses from continuing operations of $198.0 million (which includes a $107 million goodwill impairment). In the nine months ended August 31, 2014 alone, API reported a net loss from continuing operations of $17.7 million. To date, API has not reported operating income or net income in any fiscal year under Vintage's control. API's cash balance at May 31, 2011 was $108.4 million. Its cash balance at August 31, 2014 is $7.7 million. API's long-term debt balance at May 31, 2011 was $2.2 million. Its long-term debt balance at August 31, 2014 is $130.1 million. Vintage is highly critical of IEC's financial performance. And, while it would purport otherwise, Vintage has not demonstrated any ability to manage or succeed in the contract manufacturing space.

21 IEC believes Vintage's slate will not add stockholder value

22 Conclusion The Board is committed and has been committed to increase stockholder returns. As a micro cap, thinly traded company, IEC stock prices can vary widely during any measurement periods. We believe in long term growth, and do not have a quarter to quarter short term mind set – Some of our programs can take more than five years to unfold – We are willing to invest in programs that do not yield immediate profitability but promise longer term favorable returns – We continue to support our customers with a focused management team in good times and bad

23 Conclusion The Board is committed and has been committed to increase stockholder returns. Vintage has misrepresented the IEC board's willingness to responsibly increase shareholder value. The board, through our independent directors, looks seriously at any credible proposal. The dissident slate does not have a better strategy or relevant experience and has repeatedly made false allegations about IEC. Vintage's control in API is a failure. Mr. Kahn's slate is compromised by conflicts of interest, they have no coherent plan, and manipulated the facts in a questionable manner – the stockholder's choices could not be clearer
