Media Release

Syngenta supports Global Crop Diversity Trust

Basel, Switzerland, 2 March 2004

Syngenta announced today its support for the Global Crop Diversity Trust, a unique public-private partnership that will help conserve gene banks and safeguard crop diversity for future generations. In the first pledge from the private agribusiness sector to this innovative partnership, Syngenta will contribute $1 million to the development of the Trust. The Trust, currently based in Rome, has started as a joint initiative of the International Plant Genetic Resources Institute and the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

The crop diversity collections, holding millions of plant samples housed in gene banks, are part of mankind's agricultural heritage and provide the raw material necessary for plant breeders to develop reliable, hardier, more productive and nutritious food crops for farmers. Syngenta's support for the Global Crop Diversity Trust is part of the company's commitment to the goals of the International Treaty of Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture. This treaty addresses the problem of ensuring conservation, access and fair sharing of plant genetic resources.

Heinz Imhof, Chairman of Syngenta, said: "Syngenta is honored to be joining with the FAO, the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research and several governmental and donor agencies in supporting this important initiative. It underpins the world's ability to provide sufficient food for a burgeoning population."

"The Global Crop Diversity Trust needs support from all who have a stake in conserving plant genetic diversity and hence our food supply," said Geoff Hawtin, Interim Director of the Global Crop Diversity Trust. "Syngenta's contribution is an exemplary commitment and shows how the private sector can make a real difference to our work."

Syngenta is a world-leading agribusiness committed to sustainable agriculture through innovative research and technology. The company is a leader in crop protection and ranks third in the high-value commercial seeds market. Sales in 2003 were approximately $6.6 billion. Syngenta employs more than 19,000 people in over 90 countries. Syngenta is listed on the Swiss stock exchange (SYNN) and in New York (SYT).
